How We Listen to Music Today: The Streaming Revolution

Have you ever thought about how you listen to music? Your parents probably bought CDs or downloaded songs. But today, the music world is completely different thanks to one thing: streaming.

What is streaming? It's like having access to every song in the world in your pocket. You don't own the music; you pay for a subscription (like to Spotify, VK Music, or Yandex Music) and can listen to anything, anytime. This is now how most people in the world discover and enjoy music.

How did this change the industry?

- For listeners: It's amazing! For a small monthly price, you have a library of over 100 million songs. You can create your own playlists, discover new artists through algorithm recommendations, and listen offline.
- For artists: It's more complicated. It's very easy to put your song on these platforms, so millions of new artists can be heard. A song can become a global hit from a TikTok trend in just one day! But artists earn very little money from streams. To be successful, they now need to earn money from concerts, merchandise (like t-shirts), and brand deals, not just from selling songs.

The biggest star of this era? Look at Drake or Travis Scott. They are masters of the streaming world. They break records for the most streams in a day. They plan their album releases and promotions perfectly for the digital age. They understand that today, an album isn't just music; it's content for social media, videos, and online discussions.

The power has shifted. It's not just about record labels anymore.

Now, playlists (like Spotify's "Today's Top Hits") and social media platforms are the new radio, deciding what becomes popular.

Questions:

1. What are two main advantages of streaming services for music listeners?
2. Do you think the shift from buying CDs to streaming is a good change overall? Explain your opinion.
3. Imagine you are creating a "Music by Mood" playlist for an amazing Friday evening. What kind of songs or which artists (foreign or Russian) would you include and why?

Match the way of watching (1-4) with its description (a-d).

1. streaming
2. content
3. playlists
4. algorithm

Screen Stories: How We Watch Films Today

Going to the cinema is still fun. But how we watch films is changing fast. Let's look at the new ways to enjoy stories on screen.

The Streaming Revolution

Ten years ago, if you wanted to watch a new film, you went to the cinema or bought a DVD. Now, you can watch almost any film at home. Services like Netflix, VK Video, and Kinopoisk have thousands of films and series. You pay a small monthly price and watch what you want, when you want. This is called streaming. It is very popular because it is easy and convenient. Many families watch films together on their TV or even on a laptop.

Films Made for Your Phone

Look at TikTok or YouTube Shorts. Many young people watch very short videos there. Now, some filmmakers are creating mini-movies – short films made just for phones. These stories are only 2-5 minutes long, but they can be very exciting or funny. It is a new way to tell a story for a generation that loves quick, cool content.

Global Stories, Local Voices

Before, most big films came from Hollywood in the USA. Now, thanks to streaming, we can watch fantastic films from all over the world. A great thriller from Korea, a funny comedy from Spain, or an emotional drama from India – all are available with subtitles. We can learn about different cultures and see that great stories can come from anywhere.

The Cinema Fights Back

With so many films at home, why do people still go to the cinema? Because it is a special experience. The screen is huge, the sound is incredible, and you can eat popcorn with friends. Cinemas now offer more comfort: bigger seats, better food, and special events. They show big blockbusters like "Avatar" or "Dune", which are more impressive on a giant screen. All these ways are about one thing: sharing a great story.

Questions:

1. Where can you watch "mini-movies"?

2. Which new way of watching films from the text seems the most interesting to you? Why?
3. Do you think cinemas will disappear in the future because of streaming? Give a reason for your answer.

Match the way of watching (1-4) with its description (a-d).

2. Mini-movies
3. Interactive films
4. Global films

- a. Very short stories made for platforms like TikTok.
- b. You make choices that change the story.
